

KEEPING KIDS SAFE

A PARENTS' GUIDE

The Archdiocese of Washington is dedicated to promoting and ensuring the protection of all children. This flier is one in a series produced by the archdiocese to help parents better understand how to protect their children from victimization, both inside and outside the home. This guide explains how the archdiocese works to protect children in our parishes and schools.

Some signs that a child is being sexually abused:

- Has difficulty walking or sitting
- Suddenly refuses to change for gym or to participate in physical activities
- Reports nightmares or bedwetting
- Experiences a sudden change in appetite or behavior
- Demonstrates bizarre, sophisticated, or unusual sexual knowledge or behavior
- Becomes pregnant or contracts a venereal disease, particularly if under age 14
- Runs away
- Attaches very quickly to strangers or new adults in their environment

Note: Victims of sexual abuse do not necessarily exhibit physical signs of the abuse and some sexually abused children may exhibit no signs of abuse at all.

Information from U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

A long standing commitment to protecting children

The Archdiocese of Washington was one of the first dioceses in the nation to have a written Child Protection Policy and provide education on child protection. The Archdiocese of Washington also utilizes electronic background checks and fingerprinting. Our policy has become a model for dioceses nationwide and is available online at www.adw.org.

If you have worked with children in our parishes and schools, you know that any adult who has substantial contact with children must complete an application, undergo a criminal background check and attend a child protection education workshop. The program used for these workshops, Protecting God's Children for Adults, is nationally recognized and held across the archdiocese throughout the year in English and Spanish.

Children in archdiocesan schools and religious education programs also receive education on how to recognize abuse and protect themselves. In fall 2008, Touching Safety, a safe environment program that has been successfully used in 50 other dioceses, was implemented as the core curriculum for schools and parishes. The program supports the teachings of the Catholic Church, has age-appropriate lessons and connects with the Protecting God's Children for Adults education.

An archdiocesan Child Protection Advisory Board of lay experts (including at least one victim-survivor) monitors the archdiocese's outreach and compliance with the Child Protection Policy. In addition, the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops audits all dioceses on their compliance with the U.S. Bishops' Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People. The auditors conduct interviews and review records and materials relating to education, background checks, compliance monitoring, reporting and healing. The archdiocese has been found in full compliance every year.

Since 1993, the archdiocese has had a Case Review Board to assist the Archbishop in assessing allegations of child sexual abuse against clergy and fitness for ministry.

Learn more about the Archdiocese of Washington's commitment to protecting children www.adw.org • Office of Child and Youth Protection • 301-853-5328

ARCHDIOCESE OF WASHINGTON
CHILD PROTECTION

A PARENTS' GUIDE

Archdiocese of Washington Child and Youth Protection

Help, healing and support for victims

The Archdiocese of Washington has long been committed to the treatment and healing of those harmed. These are some of the ways the archdiocese has reached out to victims of abuse by archdiocesan personnel:

- Apology and statement of remorse by a bishop and leadership.
- Immediate offer of paid counseling, therapy and other assistance (1) of an individual's choice, (2) for as long as needed to heal and (3) for family members, in some situations.
- Assistance regardless of legal claims. The archdiocese has paid for counseling even after being sued and even after the suit was dismissed from the court on its merits, because we believe it is the right thing to do.
- Opportunity to meet with a bishop. Our bishops have traveled to meet with victims, provided them with a private phone number and e-mail, and set aside regular office time just for victims who would like to meet.
- Immediate reporting of allegations and support for victims in pursuing criminal prosecution.
- More than $7 million in direct assistance has been provided to victims and millions more spent on prevention efforts. Settlements have been made, if appropriate in an individual's situation.
- Licensed clinical social worker is available to assist those coming forward, in conjunction with the archdiocese's Office of Child and Youth Protection Services.
- Services to assist victims and implement prevention programs.
- Healing Masses offered for victims and their families.

Reporting abuse

- If you suspect child abuse (sexual, physical or neglect of anyone under the age of 18) or have been a victim of child abuse, report it immediately to the local law enforcement agency or the local department of social services (Department of Child Protective Services in the District of Columbia).
- If you suspect child abuse involving any archdiocesan personnel, also report it immediately to the Office of Child and Youth Protection for the Archdiocese of Washington, at 301-853-5328.
- The complete Child Protection Policy, which includes a form to report suspected abuse by archdiocesan personnel and details on where to report to civil authorities (Pages 49-50) is available online at www.adw.org.

By the numbers

Between July 2012 and June 2013 in the Archdiocese of Washington:

- 97 child protection workshops were held for adults who work with children in the archdiocese
- 3,989 people, including clergy, new employees and volunteers attended those workshops
- 14,514 Catholic school children received safe environment education
- 22,460 children in religious education programs received safe environment education
- 3,177 employees, volunteers and clergy were fingerprinted

Since 2003 the Archdiocese of Washington has:

- Trained more than 57,000 clergy, employees and volunteers in parishes in creating safe environments and preventing child sexual abuse
- Prepared more than 307,000 children to recognize abuse and protect themselves
- Conducted more than 44,000 criminal background checks